

Postscript

The worldview of the New Testament is out of date in many ways. But the modern world of quantum reality that gives priority to events rather than things, events which are both subjective and objective, would be compatible with the world of the New Testament. While no one can prove the existence of God, there are some beliefs that are clearly indefensible. To claim that God is all-powerful and good is a contradiction in terms. If God is all-powerful, then evil must be part of God's activity. If God's goodness is fundamental, then God cannot do evil. While other Christians do not accept the understanding of Abba presented in this book, Cobb believes that those who continue to adhere to the more traditional views of God will not lead the world out of the tragic direction it is heading. The Abba of Jesus is genuinely worthy of worship and brings joy and peace to the believer.
